ILLUSTRATIONS WITHOUT THE BUSYWORK

One request in. Every carrier's illustration back.

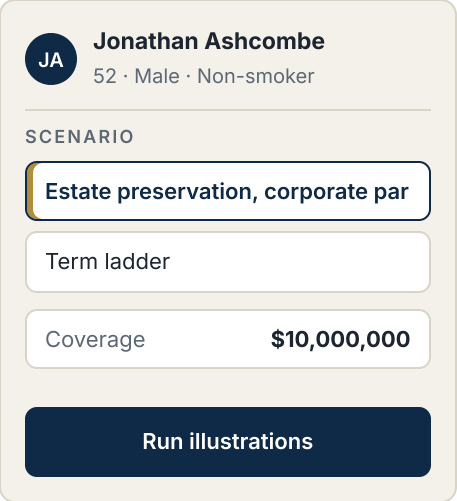

The advisor asks once and gets a finished, branded comparison built from the carriers' own illustrations. The firm's system does everything in between.

3 choices	0 logins	Minutes	100% carrier
Client, scenario, amount. Nothing else to enter.	Advisors never open a carrier tool.	Target turnaround, without watching it run.	Every final figure comes from the carrier's PDF.

THE ADVISOR EXPERIENCE

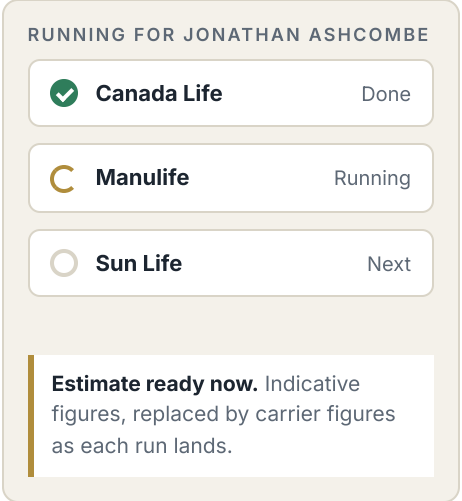

Three moments, and only the first takes effort

1 · ASK

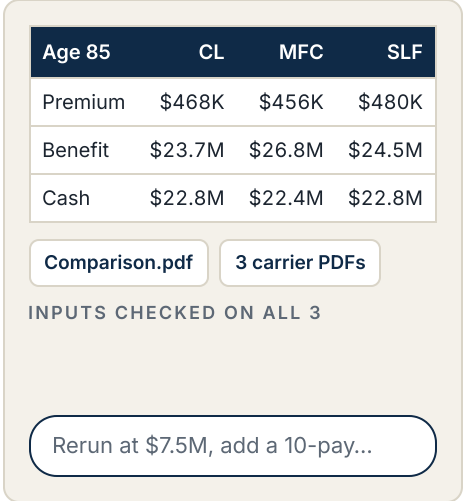

From the client record, where the details are already filled in. Or said in plain words to Claude, at a desk or on a phone.

2 · CARRY ON

The work happens on the firm's system, so the advisor can close the laptop. A labelled estimate appears in seconds for early thinking.

3 · RECEIVE

One message with the branded comparison and the carrier PDFs, saved to the client file. Changes are a reply, not a new form.

DESIGN RULES

What we hold to, whatever the back end becomes

- Pick a scenario, not a product. The firm's best case designer sets each preset once.
- Never make them wait or watch. They are told when it is ready.
- Estimates are always labelled. Only carrier figures reach a client.
- Start where advisors already are. The client record, Claude, or a phone.
- Problems go to back office. A stalled run arrives later, not as an error.
- Every number has a source. The carrier PDF is attached, with date and version.

BEHIND THE BUTTON

One pipeline, with the carrier tools doing the calculating

Intake
Client record, Claude or phone. Preset fills in the design.

Translate
One case becomes each carrier's own fields and limits.

Run
The carrier's tool produces its illustration. Fastest available route.

Check
Inputs printed on each PDF are matched to the request.

Deliver
Comparison built, PDFs attached, saved and sent.

The run step tries the fastest route first and falls back on its own

ROUTE	HOW IT WORKS	TARGET TIME	USED WHEN
1 Direct link	The system sends the case straight to the carrier's illustration service and receives the PDF, with no screens involved.	Seconds	The carrier agrees to it
2 Scripted browser	A recorded script operates the carrier's web tool on a firm-run cloud machine.	1–2 min	The default
3 Claude takes over	If a carrier screen has changed, Claude finishes the run by reading the screen, then drafts the script fix.	3–5 min	A script fails
4 Case-prep person	Back office completes the run by hand and drops in the PDF.	Same day	Last resort

WHY IT HOLDS UP TECHNICALLY

Standard parts, arranged carefully

- Carrier tools are forms that return a PDF. Filling a web form and reading a PDF are both well-established automation.
- Logins sit in a secure vault on the firm's system. Sessions are kept alive, and an advisor approves on their phone only if a carrier asks for a code.
- A daily test case per carrier finds a changed screen before an advisor does.
- Nothing is delivered unchecked. A mismatch between the request and the carrier PDF stops that carrier and alerts back office.
- Full record. Who asked, when, which carrier software version, and the PDF itself.

What has to be true first

- Carrier consent in writing for automated runs on the firm's system. This is the largest dependency.
- Compliance approval of the branded comparison and the labelled estimate.
- A privacy decision on where client data is processed and stored.
- A named owner for presets, carrier mappings and upkeep.

GETTING THERE

Advisors get the simple experience from the first phase

PHASE 1
The front door
Intake, presets, estimate and comparison. Back office runs the carrier tools by hand behind it.

PHASE 2
One carrier automated
Scripted browser with Claude as the fallback, for the most-used carrier and product.

PHASE 3
All carriers, fastest routes
Remaining carriers added, client-record button, direct links where carriers agree.

Times are design targets and have not been tested against the carrier tools. Sample client and figures are fictional. Branding is a stand-in pending the firm's logo and colours.
